

WHATEVER HAPPENED TO DIANA TRASK

A Memoir by Diana Trask

This is the story of a beautiful young girl from Melbourne with an outstanding voice who is invited to tour Australia as a support act for Frank Sinatra in 1959. She accepts his advice to try her luck in the USA, and at the age of eighteen flies alone to New York to make her debut at the famous Blue Angel Night Club. Diana succeeds in popular music and then re-invents herself to carve out a new career as a successful country singer, touring the world and performing for fans in the USA, UK, Europe, Australia and Japan. But, it was not all smooth sailing.

Diana was one of the first popular Australian singers to be successful in the USA and many others followed: Helen Reddy, Olivia Newton-John and in recent times Keith Urban. American audiences have fond memories of Diana's appearances on the television series Sing Along with Mitch then her hit songs on the Country Billboard charts and her Australian fans will remember The Diana Trask Show.

In the book, Diana talks about her friendships and collaboration with superstars such as Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr, Bob Hope, Glenn Campbell and many others, and reveals her struggles to find success in music and love.
